Reasons for Air Bubble Formation

Acrylic sheets bonded in very high humidity conditions

Use of water based synthetic resin adhesives other than PEVA (Polyethylene Vinyl Acetate Co polymer)

Moisture loss from the substrate after installation

Local debonding due to an uneven or improper substrate surface

Inadequate or insufficient pressing during the acrylic bonding period

Use of extremely large acrylic/PVC laminate sheets (more than 8 ft x 2 ft long)

To avoid de lamination / air bubbles in between ply and laminate the above steps should be taken care of.
